Under-Secretary-General, United Nations

From 2014 to 2022, she worked for Cities Alliance, serving as the Regional Manager for Latin America and the Caribbean, where she supported communities of practice, promoted the transfer and exchange of knowledge, and provided advisory services on housing and urban policies in Brazil, Jamaica, Haiti, Guatemala, El Salvador, Mexico, Chile and Paraguay, among others. She also led the Organization's global programme on informality in response to the Covid-19 pandemic. From 2005 to 2014, Ms. Rossbach served as a Senior Housing Specialist at the World Bank, providing technical assistance and facilitating high-level policy dialogue to develop and implement housing solutions in several countries around the world. This includes in Brazil, where she had a leadership role in the design of large-scale housing and informal settlements upgrading programmes, and in India, Mozambique, the Philippines and South Africa.

She also worked for the Municipality of São Paulo and was the Founding Director of the non-governmental organization Interação, affiliated with Slums Dwellers International, developing high-impact projects in informal communities in the State of São Paulo and the city of Recife, Brazil.

Dr. Qu Dongyu, Director-General, Food and Agriculture Organization of the UN

Dr. Qu Dongyu assumed office as the Director-General of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) on August 1, 2019.

Born in 1963 to a rice-growing family in China’s Hunan Province, Dr Qu studied horticultural science at Hunan Agricultural University and then plant breeding and genetics at the Chinese Academy of Agricultural Sciences. He later added environmental science to his knowledge portfolio while earning a PhD at Wageningen University, in the Netherlands.

Before coming to FAO, Dr. Qu served as China’s Vice Minister of Agriculture and Rural Affairs, where one of his achievements was to promote inclusive and innovative development and make sure information and communication technologies were available in rural areas so that more than 400 million farmers could use their smartphones as a new farming tool.

Prior to his portfolio as Vice Minister, Dr. Qu served as Vice Governor for several years in China’s north-west, Ningxia, where he accomplished a number of significant projects aiming to lift millions of local residents out of poverty, and he was recognized as a big contributor to China’s anti-poverty project in that part of country.

That vision has been consistent across a professional career that includes periods in central and local government, in and leading research institutes, and as a human resources leader at the China Three Gorges Project Development Corporation, a USD 40 billion investment project.

Recognized for scientific innovation as a famous scholar, Dr. Qu has for 30 years been involved in international cooperation and orchestrated major events including the World Potato Congress, the International Rice Congress and the International Conference on Plant Protection and participated in multilateral initiatives such as the World Trade Organization and the G20 as well as numerous bilateral initiatives involving Asia, Africa and Latin America. He has also directly led the design of flagship South-South Cooperation projects with FAO and the World Bank.
